Aims & Scope

The Journal of Homeland Security and Emergency Management publishes original, innovative, and timely articles on the fields of homeland security and emergency management. Our intent is to provide information and insights in the field by featuring contributions from authors with essential knowledge and experience in a broad array of professions, including emergency management, engineering; political science/public administration/policy analysis, decision sciences, and health and medicine.

About Our Sponsor

Founded in 1947, University of Maryland University College (UMUC) is one of 11 degree-granting institutions in the University System of Maryland. Over the years UMUC has earned a global reputation for excellence for its broad range of cutting-edge curricula and its leadership in the fields of distance and adult higher education. UMUC offers bachelor's and master's degree programs that focus on emergency management, homeland security, criminal justice, and cybersecurity at classroom locations in the Washington/national capital area, Europe, and Asia as well as online. These programs—designed and delivered by professionals with practical experience in the field—provide in-depth study of the ethical, political, legal, social, environmental, economic, and operational issues related to security.
